JEWISH GENEALOGICAL AND ARCHIVAL SOCIETY OF GREATER PHILADELPHIA

6/13/2021

Hi Everyone,

Today's guest speaker was Phil Goldfarb, Founder and President, Jewish Genealogical Society of Tulsa. His topic was How to Utilize the JewishGen Discussion Group Effectively. It was informative and very interesting.

I have been using the discussion group to advertise our meetings and learn about other society events and meetings. I have read about records being translated. I have posted questions. We learned that 19,600 members from around the world are registered on the site. Over 15,000 messages have been posted. The archives include messages from 1998.

Time to get back to my research! Any questions about registration on the site contact support@JewishGen.org. Want to ask Phil a question, Phil.goldfarb@cox.net. If you missed the meeting and want to learn how to ask and answer questions or search for help in a variety of topics related to your research, and stay up to date with announcements, this is the place for you!

Below is the link to recording of the meeting:

Beginner's Corner and Research Tips

Look for our Getting Started with Jewish Genealogy under the Publications tab on our website for a comprehensive beginner's guide.

As a Jewish Genealogist I am always looking to make connections. I am involved in collaborative endeavors to build my family tree. I continue to search through the internet for records and clues. I find deceased relatives and look for living ones to connect with. I've found many relatives through a variety of sources. Are you putting yourself out there to make as many connections as possible?

The US immigration and naturalization records are extremely important in our genealogical journey! Join us next time when Marion Smith illustrates how to use these records for Jewish immigrants. See Future JGASGP Zoom Meeting info. below.

How do I know when my genealogy research is complete? You're never really "done" researching your family history. There are always new people, stories, and records to add to your tree. Enjoy the process, and don't forget to *source everything! Sign up for the Family History Daily and receive a free comprehensive genealogy checklist. See the information below in Resource Suggestions. The more you read, listen, research, and collaborate with others, the more you learn. See the Genealogy Bank series information about citing sources below in resource suggestions.

Guest Speaker: Marian Smith, Retired Historian at INS

Marian Smith retired in 2018 after thirty years as an Historian for the Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS), later US Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS). She now speaks to groups on US immigration and nationality records and leads the I&N Records Fortnightly study group.

Topic: Researching US Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) Records

Marian Smith presents an overview of three historical eras of US immigration and naturalization records, illustrated with documents of Jewish immigrants. Using a timeline tool (included in the handout), she demonstrates how plotting an immigrant's life events can identify what records may exist for that particular immigrant and where these records can be found.

West Laurel Hill Cemetery to Open New Jewish Section

By Andy Gotlieb June 4, 2021

Renderings of Makom Shalom at West Laurel Hill Cemetery. Courtesy of West Laurel Hill Cemetery
West Laurel Hill Cemetery opened a Jewish section in 2011 called Chesed Shel Emet, and it proved so successful that the Bala Cynwyd cemetery is breaking ground on a new Jewish section.

To be called Makom Shalom, A Place of Peace, the new section will feature space for 884 plots spread over about 2.5 acres of rolling hillside landscaped into three terraces, cemetery President and CEO Nancy Goldenberg said. The new section is slated to debut in June 2022; design work began in 2019.

“The design speaks to the need for a contemplative cemetery experience that knits Jewish tradition with the natural beauty and serenity of a very special place,” she said.

West Laurel Hill, which was founded in 1869 and covers 187 acres, hired Boston-based Halvorson | Tighe & Bond Studio to design Makom Shalom, which will be north and adjacent to Chesed Shel Emet and its 1,780 plots.

“(Chesed Shel Emet) exceeded our expectations in terms of popularity. A third of the plots were sold within a couple years,” Goldenberg said, noting that nearly all of those plots are now sold.

The cemetery also completed in 2017 a 385-plot section for members of Orthodox Lower Merion Synagogue. Bob Uhlig, the vice president of landscape architecture and urban design for Halvorson | Tighe & Bond, said the new section’s design will incorporate Jewish elements of enclosure, separation, and intimacy, while tying into the neighborhood. Formal gates will incorporate washing stations.

Aside from existing mature trees on the site, plants that have significance to Judaism and Jewish history will be incorporated into the landscaping, including willow, myrtle, flowering almond and cedar of Lebanon, Uhlig said.

“We’ll use species indigenous to Israel, but hardy enough to live in Philadelphia,” he said.

“This will create a sense of place and tell a story in the living landscape of the connection between modern Jews and Jewish cultural and religious history,” Arboretum Manager Aaron Greenberg said.

The sloping section presented both opportunities and problems to tackle, Uhlig said.

“With those slopes came some nice challenges,” he said. “We creatively integrated the stormwater into the pathways.” Goldenberg didn’t rule out further expansion of either the Jewish or non-Jewish sections of West Laurel Hill, which is a private, nonprofit entity that also operates a funeral home.

“We’re not running out of space,” she said.

That’s unlike several of the older, strictly Jewish cemeteries in the Philadelphia area. The Jewish Exponent has written several stories in recent years detailing the decline of cemeteries that have little remaining space and have limited numbers of new burials, resulting in poor financial conditions.

Alex Krakovsky announcement:

Good news is good news.

FamilySearch has finally resumed digitizing Ukrainian archives. It's been ten years since the project was suddenly interrupted by the awful Yanukovich government.

It kicked off with Poltava, Kyiv, Mykolayiv, Kropyvnytsky branches and soon will be scaled to most regional and central archives.

A blast of millions of records is going to hit the web soon for instant trouble-free access.

With a bunch of various other scanning projects Ukrainian archives joined the club of the most open and innovative in the world. Standing for open and free instant access from anywhere around the globe.

The change is finally here.

Glory to Ukraine!

Alex Krakovsky has now reported that Family Search is now actively filming records in several archives throughout Ukraine, including archives he is not able to get to. These records will eventually be added to their online catalog. While this is great news it highlights the fact that we already have a large number of records that Alex has filmed and provided to us that need to be transcribed into Excel spreadsheets for inclusion in the JewishGen Ukraine database. These records are only of use to most researchers if they have been transcribed in English and added to the searchable database. If you can help translate these handwritten Cyrillic records or are interested in setting up a fund-raising project to hire translators for a town of interest, contact the Ukraine Research Division's Director of Data Acquisition Gary Pokrassa, at gpokrassa@jewishgen.org. He has a long list of places for which we have records now that are in need of transcription. Donations for translation projects through JewishGen are tax-deductible to the extent allowed by law.
